

A photograph of a modern interior space. The room features a large window with a dark frame, divided into several panes. The window looks out onto a garden with trees and a wooden fence. The walls are made of a textured, light-colored material, possibly limestone or travertine. The floor is covered in large, light-colored stone tiles. In the foreground, there is a long, low wooden table with a dark base. On the table, there is a potted plant with green leaves and some decorative items. The lighting is warm and natural, coming from the window, creating soft shadows on the walls.

Antigo Limestone

LIMESTONE is an exceptional sedimentary rock that has been highly regarded throughout history. It is sourced from multiple regions, such as Portugal, Spain, Turkey, and France.

Limestone, an organic sedimentary rock, appears in various forms due to the buildup of shells, corals, and algae, or through direct crystallization from water. This formation process can lead to some types of limestone containing small fossils and traces of marine life, enhancing the stone's natural appeal. Its strength and density make limestone a popular choice for both commercial and residential uses.

Natural Stone Resources offers a comprehensive selection of limestone in various colors, finishes, and dimensions, featuring products such as field tiles, mosaics, trims, slabs, pavers, copings, wall caps, and veneers.

TRAVERTINE is a natural stone created by the accumulation of mineral deposits from hot springs, leading to a distinctive porous surface marked by pits and holes. This stone is recognized for its unique texture, which features visible voids and veins that can be filled or left open, based on aesthetic preferences. The natural travertine tones range from soft ivory and light creamy white to rich golden walnut and honey tones, silvery gray, dark red, and warm coffee tones.

Travertine is a durable and long-lasting natural stone, noted for its resistance to scratches, heat, and moisture. This adaptable material is suitable for various uses, such as flooring, walls, patios, pool decks, countertops, and wall cladding in commercial and residential settings.

Natural Stone Resources provides a range of travertine options in different colors, finishes, and sizes. Their product lineup includes field tiles, mosaics, trims, slabs, pavers, pool copings, wall caps, veneers, and flagstones.
